The last few days the English papers have been all discussing the efforts which it is supposed Dalton has made to secure the Catholic influence in Ireland for the tory side. The story seems to be generally believed. Mgr. Persico's mission and present residence in the land seems to verify this story. But Dillon who is known to be in close communication with the Catholic clergy is not any Irish patriot since the day of O'Donnell, in discussing this matter gives it out cold that the Irish people would take their religion, but not their politics from Rome. If the story should be true and the combination should be effected it would be an anomalous state of affairs to see the Roman Catholic clergy and the Protestant Orangemen in one side and the main body of the Irish people on the other.

The Marquis of Ely owns large estates in Ireland but has not been there for ten years. When the plan of campaign was inaugurated, he refused to allow any of the rents and the result was that several of his tenants were evicted. The government took strong measures to support him in his policy. It occurred to him a few days ago to go over and look into the matter himself. He conferred with the parish priest and finally made up his mind that the rents were exorbitant. He then reduced them fifty per cent and offered the tenants time of grace. He also ordered the restoration of the evicted tenants at his own expense and the readmission of the evicted tenants. This act must have great moral weight with the English people. Most of the owners of the Irish soil do not live in Ireland, and know nothing of the condition of the country. They are in the worst position that the Marquis of Ely was. He was thoughtful enough to make a personal investigation and wealthy enough to accept the situation. If the English government had any desire to settle the Irish question on a fair basis it would be a good idea for the government to run an excursion of the land owners who have never been to Ireland, to Ireland and judge for themselves of the justness of the Irish demand.

A meeting was held last Saturday evening at Plymouth to arrange for celebrating the tercentenary of the destruction of the Armada. Letters were read from Lord Francis Hervey and Mayor Wm. Provis, which were similar in tone to two of the great naval heroes of Queen Elizabeth's time. A Catholic-Schoolmaster of that who protested against the celebration on the ground that it would be an affront to Spain. He also remarked, incidentally, that the destruction of the Armada was due to the elements and not to the prowess of the British. The latter is no doubt true, but the bold, defiant manner with which England, under the leadership of her renowned queen, prepared for the reception of the Armada, marked the culminating point in British patriotism during one of the most important periods of her history. It is right that she should celebrate it, therefore, and every English speaking person will feel some pride in it. Spaniards will be over sensitive if they consider this celebration as an affront. We regularly celebrate the anniversary of the Declaration of Independence, and have celebrated the hundredth anniversary of important event of the war of the revolution. It is customary now for the American minister in London, in his official capacity, to have some connection with one of our greatest national anniversary. If this is not objectionable to England certainly the proposed celebration of the three hundredth anniversary of the Armada in England ought not to be offensive to Spain.

The effort of the members of Congress to pretend to be friends of the reduction of the surplus is a very hollow sham. Both parties seem to be in accord with President Cleveland's message on this subject. This would make Mr Blaine very uncomfortable. He seemed to think, in his interview, that the way to get rid of the surplus was to spend it. The country thinks differently. The Cincinnati Commercial, one of the leading republican papers of the northwest, including the Chicago Tribune, the St. Paul Pioneer Press, the Minneapolis Journal, the Omaha Bee have come out very decided against the idea that the taxes on necessaries will relieve them off of luxuries have to bear. Notwithstanding the fact that a certain amount of some ultra protectionists argues, the people are not deceived. They understand that it cannot affect labor in the country to take the duties off of sugar and fruits. The question of protection is not essentially involved in the reduction of the surplus. All that has been urged is that the reduction should take place in such a way as not to affect the price of labor or injure any invested capital. No reasonable free trader or protectionist can object to a modification of the tariff on this principle. It seems as if we would grow rich as much as if we were to destroy property. Republican leaders have made [illegible] platform of 1884. The country expected a reduction of the surplus last. Now up to this time the whole question has been treated simply as a means of making party capital. Unwise leaders

N WHO WAS SHOT BY S DE YOUNG IS DEAD

The city council met and adjourned a special session last evening to consider matters relating to the [illegible]

Mr. L. P. Mead is busily engaged with the O'Grady members record for December. The highest temperature 46 on the 3rd; lowest temperature 27 on the 31st; highest daily mean temperature 39 on the 7th; lowest daily mean temperature 6 on the 21st; weekly mean temperature 27.55. Prevailing direction of wind west.

A burglar entered the butcher shop of Mr. P. McPherson on North Tejon street, some time during Wednesday night and after breaking open the safe, helped himself to the contents of the same, a seven dollar watch and change in the drawer of cash of his three assistants. This was to say but nothing to the store was disturbed and the window was found with [illegible] of every description morning. Mr. Pherson is not looking for the burglar [illegible] his return.

Yesterday morning the sheriff received a telegram dated Castle Rock and signed by the conductor of the north bound early train on the D. & R. G. asking them to have a watch kept out if possible after two men who had left the train at Colorado Springs. It was [illegible] that three men had boarded the train at Pueblo one of whom was [illegible] at about displayed several hundred dollars to his companions who in some way got possession of the money while the train was in transit from Pueblo to Colorado Springs and got off as soon as they reached here. The victim, it seems, did not discover his loss until the train reached Castle Rock. A description of the thieves was furnished the officers and a vigilant and successful search was instituted. Under sheriff Lon Jackson arrested one of them on Pike's Peak avenue, and the other was corralled by officers Williams and Duncan near the Gazette office.

Messrs. May & Clark opened their new restaurant on Pike's Peak avenue last evening for dinner, and served an elegant, bountiful and savory repast. They have pleasant and commodious quarters and have fitted the dining room up neatly and attractively, and it is lighted by a powerful arc electric lamp. Both gentlemen are quite well known in Colorado Springs, Mr. Clark particularly as a popular and successful caterer. No one can [illegible] Parker House tables [illegible] and a reputation will no doubt attract [illegible] to prepare [illegible] will be prepared [illegible] the day and [illegible]
